

Paul Lamontagne
Managing Director
FinDev Canada

Paul is Managing Director of Development Finance Institute Canada (DFIC) Inc., Canada's development finance institution operating under the brand name FinDev Canada.

Paul is a social entrepreneur who brings a passion for making an impact in the world. He has extensive experience in banking, private equity, venture capital and impact investing, and a reputation for building strong teams and achieving results.

Previously, Paul was Executive Investment Partner at Capafrica, a Canadian private equity group that invests in renewable energy, infrastructure and telecommunications in Africa. Before his role at Capafrica, Paul was Head, Africa & Middle East, Global Banks at the Canadian Imperial Bank of Commerce (CIBC).

Paul served as founding CEO of Enablis Financial Corporation, where he pioneered a new model for impact investing in early-stage small and medium-sized enterprises in South Africa, Kenya and Tanzania.

Currently, Paul is a Director of the Young Presidents' Organization, a US-based global network of CEOs, and Chair of Sagarmatha Technologies, a technology platform company in South Africa.

Paul holds a Bachelor of Arts from McGill University and an MBA from the Institut d'Études Politiques de Paris.

The Development Finance Institute Canada Inc., operating under the FinDev Canada brand, is a Canadian institution dedicated to providing financial services to the private sector in developing countries with the aim of combating poverty through economic growth by focusing on three main themes: economic development through job creation, women's economic empowerment, and climate change mitigation. The Development Finance Institute Canada Inc. is a wholly owned subsidiary of Export Development Canada (EDC).